explained the source of the additional $9,619.00 they were requesting.) The Court determined Pierce had to indemnify and defend the Fire Department against Roorda's claims regarding the trucks' design and manufacture only—not also against his claims that the Fire Department had acted negligently. See Dkt. #41 (Order Granting Insurance Companies' Motion for Summary Judgment on Liability but Reserving Judgment on the Amount of Damages Owed). The Court concluded Pierce breached this duty, but did not award damages because the Insurance Companies had not provided an itemized list of how they incurred their costs and fees in the underlying allegation, such that the Court could not deduct the costs and fees they spent defending against the negligence claims.

The Insurance Companies now request $349, 944.61 for defense of the design and manufacturing defect claims. (They claim only $12,870.50 was spent defending against the negligence and other claims.) Pierce argues the Insurance Companies grossly exaggerate the amount owed by (1) failing to consider whether they would have incurred certain costs and fees even if there were no products liability claim and by (2) including costs and fees incurred before the Insurance Companies tendered defense of the case and those incurred in bringing this case. Pierce argues the Insurance Companies only spent $172,674.99 defending against Roorda's products liability claims, and they have provided no evidence that they even paid this bill. The Insurance Companies reply they paid for all defense costs in the underlying lawsuit, and it is the Court's prerogative to determine how much of a "haircut" to apply to their fee request.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Pierce also asks the Court to strike the Insurance Companies' motion as untimely, because they filed it after the dispositive motions deadline. After deciding liability, the Court requested additional information to calculate the Insurance Companies' damages award. It is specious to suggest the Court cannot extend its own deadlines. Pierce's request to strike is DENIED. 24

1 When evaluating the number of hours reasonably expended, a court must generally segregate time spent on successful claims from hours spent on unsuccessful claims, covered claims from un-covered claims, duplicated effort, and productive time from unproductive time. See Supervalu Holdings v. Morris, No. C09-5351BHS, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20351, at *9 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 17, 2011) (citing Hume v. American Disposal Co., 124 Wn. 2d 656, 673, 880 P.2d 988 (1994)). The Fire Department tendered defense to Pierce on February 9, 2012. The trial court granted the Fire Department's motion to dismiss Roorda's negligence claims on April 5, 2013, leaving only his products liability claims. The case was resolved on June 26, 2013. Between February 2012 and April 2013, the Fire Department spent approximately $120,000. Approximately 1/3 of this amount was spent defending against Roorda's negligence claims, and approximately 2/3 was spent defending against his products liability claims. The Insurance Companies can recover $80,000 for the costs and expenses incurred regarding the products liability claims. Between April 5 and June 26, the Fire Department incurred approximately $170,000—an amount the Insurance Companies may recover entirely because it is solely attributable to Roorda's products liability claims. The Insurance Companies may not recover the costs and expenses they incurred after resolution of the underlying case. Pierce owes 18 // // 20 // // 24
